CHARLOTTESVILLE—In response to the student-led protest, the UVA Board of Visitors released a statement defending its efforts to preserve the monument on McCormick Road, which depicts an ogre devouring a naked child. “Our students must understand that you can’t erase history,” the letter says. “While it may be tragic that the naked child was totally devoured by the ogre, bones and all, it happened. And we can’t change that.”

Student organizing groups take issue with the University’s statement, claiming it is unjust to commemorate a big ‘ole smelly child-snarfing ogre. “It’s right across from a daycare,” says Roland Creech, the Vice-Chair of De-Ogre UVA. “Toddlers have to look at that thing all day and be reminded of a time when ogres could just eat a baby whenever they were peckish.”

But other students, like third year Boo Tickler, ardently disagree. “Now just hold on a second—there is something to be said in defense of Murderfuck, the Child Destroyer. Although the ogre in question did pick up the child, confirm that it was in fact a child, and subsequently decide to get his grub on, he was also a brilliant writer—and our country’s third president.”

Dudley Trolson, a first-year, agrees with Tickler. “Yeah, nobody’s denying the ogre pigged out on a naked child, okay? But it was over 200 years ago. Ogres guzzled down youngsters all the time like it was nothing. I mean, they could kill a six pack of babies by themselves no problem. So why do we have to punish this ogre for simply being a product of his time?”

In light of the controversy, President Ryan announced this morning that the Board will soon assemble a task force with at least one baby to “figure out what the fuck is going on,” in another historic win for the UVA left.

UVA OFFERS NEW COMPETITIVE INTERNSHIP FOR PSYCH MAJORS TO TAKE OVER CAPS

With quarantine entering its 9th month and the mental health of the students hitting an even deeper, rockier bottom than usual, UVa admin have revealed their newest initiative to help all students. Following in the footsteps of our esteemed overlord Thomas Jefferson, the University will transition to an entirely student-self governed form of CAPS called CRAPS: Cancellations, Rejections, And Passive Silence. The new helpline, staffed entirely by previous work-study students who lost their jobs this year, will do everything in their power to deter students from making an appointment. In order to facilitate this, CRAPS has been declared temporarily exempt from the honor code, allowing them to lie, cheat, and steal appointment times for someone who's truly been affected by this tragedy, like our lovely BOV members.

The Great and Good University of Virginia, of course, has historically had few issues with students struggling with mental health. In these unprecedented times, however, the University has noticed how the lack of access to healthy coping mechanisms — drinking secretly at Alderman during would-be study sessions — has impacted its student body.

“There are just so many of them,” says Sike Holigist, a former CAPS provider. “I don’t get paid enough for this.” The future interns, of course, won’t be paid at all.

Some regressive critics have pushed back on the idea, claiming the decision to be an “illicit, immoral, and blatantly irresponsible” one. However, the haggard, malnourished psychologists locked in the Student Health basement beg to differ. “On the contrary, I see this as the final evolution of student self-governance — almost like when you level a Charmander up into a Charizard, except that Charizard can prescribe selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors,” defended President Ryan.

“Think about it,” Ryan continued. “What are UVA’s two defining characteristics, besides misplaced elitism and men in boat shoes? We’re known for assigning responsibilities to student government in order to shirk responsibility, and competition so cutthroat that being a goddamn tour guide is a mark of prestige. Making being a counselor one of the honors of Honors, and tell the students it’s their own fault when the program inevitably goes to shit.”

If you feel the need to call the new hotline, they’re open 24/7, except for on weekends, MWF from 10am-3pm and 7pm-2am, and T/TH during even numbered hours. Proficient first year psychology students can take appointments between their class times, and they promise to give you the best therapy you’ve received in the month and half since you made the appointment.

For students looking for intermediate help before their CRAPS appointment, the University implores them to call their friend Ted at the local Jersey Mikes, he’s a pretty chill guy. You can reach him at (434) 328-8694 but per his request you must order at least a half a Stickball special to receive counseling. A representative for Jersey Mikes stressed to The Yellow Journal that a Stickball Special will not actually cure your depression but it might make you feel something for the first time in a long while.

“Oh, I didn’t see you there, Y/N.” The President turns away from his non-functioning office fireplace. “I was just counting the non-refundable housing dollars. Could you help with that later? I could use an extra pair of hands around here to spread around culpability—I mean, the work.”

“What’s going on, Y/N? You look stressed,” Jim says. You suck in the same breath he just emitted from his toothless gums. He smells like the Rotunda and the sweat of underpaid student workers. You breathe in this intoxicating CavMusk. He turns his startlingly spherical head and closes his sapphire soul-windows. You’re bringing the heat, proving that both an intimate curiosity and strong moral abhorrence for the same person can coexist in one body. Slowly, you peel off your mask. When Jim sees the bottom half of your face, he releases a breath he didn’t know he had been holding.

“You’re beautiful.” He sweeps you into his arms and kisses you. “There’s a fire burning, but it’s not in the Rotunda...it’s right in here.” He gestures, his worn and weathered hand drifting first to his heart but continuing directly down to his CARES package. “Oh, that’s not for you. Gotta fuel this 900k base salary somehow!”

Jim tears off his running shorts, and they disappear like the enrollment slots for all the “free” J-Term classes. “They don’t call me ‘Slim Jim’ for nothing,” he boasts, gesturing to his chicken-like figure, honed from years of side-stepping and social climbing.

Your lips collide like the 14th Street Bridge and an ill-fated RV. You separate only for a moment, when Slim Jim, in a un-lawyerly but highly erotic fashion, decides to confess. “Yes, of course I never cared about anyone getting COVID—except you. You mean something to me, Y/N—”

Suddenly, you wake. You’re in your dorm. Well, not your dorm, but the quarantine housing UVA set up in the condemnable hellscape that is University Gardens under the crescent moon in retrograde or whatever. It had all been a hallucination fueled by the black mold growing in the tub.

UVA TO REVOKE DEGREE FOR SAYING FUCK, BUT NOT FOR EUGENICS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA – The University Honor Council has completed their investigation following allegations of naughty language and reached the decision Friday to revoke Undergraduate degree from CLAS '06 graduate Nada Nishew. The investigation was initially launched this fall after Nishew retweeted an incriminating sentiment: "man i fucking hated college lmfao." Although Nishew did not pen the statement, nor has she attended UVA in over a decade, her online activity was brought to the attention of the Honor board by one of her 216 followers.

"Our graduates are representatives of our fine University," Honor chair Pierce Ofshit lamented. "It hurts to see our alum tarnish the reputation of Mr. Jefferson's University with their dirty mouths." Ofshit went on to say that they had "no choice" but to revoke Nishew's history degree, in what should be a "symbolic act of warning" to other foul-minded alumni. The Honor board denies allegations that their decision has anything to do with the anti-UVA sentiment expressed in the tweet or with the fact that President Jim Ryan had his ear pressed up against the door of the hearing.

Nishew was "shocked" by the entire ordeal. "It was my cousin's tweet. She asked me to retweet it – to boost her engagement." However, Honor found this matter irrelevant, noting that nowhere in her Twitter bio did Nishew clarify that retweets ≠ endorsements. Nishew pointed out the dark and deeply problematic history of many notable UVA alumni, but Honor wouldn't hear it. "After this scandal, I wouldn't believe a word she says!" Ofshit told us. "I mean, come on. Joseph Cabell? John Newcomb? Obviously we wouldn't revoke the degrees of these honorable alum who have donated so much to this school!" Ofshit refused to respond to a YELLOW JOURNAL writer noting that both of these men were known eugenicists.

"We have a long history of doing what is both great and good, and we have to have high standards for who we allow into our community of trust," Ofshit concluded, before returning to the Clark stacks for another nap.

UNIVERSITY BLAMES STUDENT SELF-GOVERNANCE FOR SUBPAR U.S. NEWS RANKING

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA—Every fall, students look forward to the beginning of a new semester, and administrators to the release of the U.S. News & World Report rankings. But when the University of Virginia was ranked #26 nationally this past September, administrators reacted in utter shock. "We admitted these students in the hopes of boosting us up to the top twenty," Dean Z. Nuts said. "But they've failed us yet again."

Keeping with a powerful, time-honored tradition, University administrators faulted student-self governance for their unflattering position. With the newly-founded Virginia School of Profiteering, there was no way that UVA should have ranked so low—unless it was for the students.

"Students should be governing themselves with the U.S. News Ranking in mind, of course," Nuts continued. "If not the ranking, then for what?"

"The problem lies with the students. Student self-governance shouldn't be limited to StudCo, Honor, narc-ing, and so on," Dean Jeremy Bentham chimed in. "Rather, it should extend to their entire livelihood. In fact, we want students to be governing themselves at all moments—for the sake of the University, after all."

In order to "encourage" said student surveillance—erm, self-governance—University officials have installed security cameras on- and off-Grounds, in addition to a host of other FBI- and CIA-approved tactics. UVA is prepared to instill governance at every level, from the inside out. The new working committee can assure precisely that.

But the news isn't all bad: UVA, for the tenth year running, ranks number one in "Self-Assured Smugness." Here's to something!

ALL IN THE FAMILY: CONSERVATIVE ASSHOLE DEFINITELY RELATED TO POLITICAL LOBBYIST WITH DIRECT LINE TO CONGRESS

The sorriest excuse for a person you know, that absolute conservative chode from Pol Honors, is definitely related to someone with a little too much power in Washington, THE YELLOW JOURNAL has learned in an exclusive report.

"I began to get suspicious when Jeff kept on talking about his 'sources on the Hill' while conspicuously gabbing with Sabato before lecture," says Gott DeCuck, who first shed light on this mystery. "There's no way a normal UVA student would have so many connections to people who play with human lives like yahtzee."

THE YELLOW JOURNAL traced the intrepid lineage of Jefferson Squarehead IV, the shithead in question, and discovered a number of harrowing truths. From terrorizing marginalized people abroad to policing marginalized people at home, the Squarehead legacy seems to be one of proud American values. And it looks like young Jeff is continuing the tradition.

A card-carrying member of Young Americans for Faiseism Freedom, Squarehead can routinely be seen with a massive American flag in his Zoom background and has a penchant for demanding his classmates be "civil," even when he shits all over their lives and livelihoods.

THE YELLOW JOURNAL was able to catch a maskless Squarehead on the way to lacrosse practice, and asked him about his parents' line of work. Is Squarehead concerned that his upbringing may be blinding him to the possibility of possessing a shred of empathy for another human?

"That's ridiculous," Squarehead said. "This PC stuff has really gotten out of hand. What am I supposed to do, respect my fellow man? It's like my uncle Bradwick Chodington always says ..."

Unfortunately, Squarehead's words were the stupidest shit our YELLOW JOURNAL reporter had ever heard, and are not fit to print. Rest assured though, if you want to find him, he'll be at the parties on Rugby that "aren't" "affiliated" with the IFC until he graduates and is placed on a nepotism fast-track to the most powerful positions in the country.

22-28 Your match is a naive, overly confident UDeMs member! The only meal you may eat from now on is brunch. Nothing good and interesting, though, like shakshuka or anything. Only avo toast. 	8-14 Your match is a Jeff Scholar! You know because they told you within a minute of meeting you. Are they wealthy? Of course, but don't dare wonder whether they really needed a full ride given their family income. It's merit-based!
15-21 Your match is your First Year Econ TA! You now worship Adam Smith as your god. You have a weirdly intense crush on them despite the fact that they're really not attractive. Must be some kind of Stockholm Syndrome, since you spent one semester hungover every Friday, staring at them while you calculated the grade you'd need on the final to pass the class. Don't question it, at least you know they'll be stable. <3 	1-7 Your match is the president of a mid-tier fraternity whose acronym sounds like a male nickname! Being the face of his diverse organization (read: they have two nursing majors), he knows how to present himself as respectful—almost as if he cares whether you orgasm. But make no mistake, he will complain about "cancel culture going too far" when no one else is listening. Good luck.

I'M A REPUBLICAN FROM WAY BACK AND A MASSIVE SHITBAG. HERE'S WHY I VOTED FOR BIDEN

I've always voted Republican, but this election, I voted for the Democrat with conservative policies.

I grew up in a diverse neighborhood of rich people from all across the political spectrum, from neo-liberal capitalists to straight-up fascists. From chili cook-offs to combining forces against rezoning, there was always a sense of friendly competition between parties. But my parents also taught me the difference between right and wrong, and Trump's use of blatant racism and demagoguery over covert racism and demagoguery? That's just wrong.

I love my country. I love the liberty, equality, and the ability to evade paying my fair share of taxes until my dying breath. Trump doesn't represent these values, but neither does the socialist left. I heard they wanted everyone to have access to things I've always believed are just for rich people—things like health care. Clearly, the country is more split than ever before between extremist poles. Biden may not be my favorite candidate, but at least he believes in moderate positions like continuing mass incarceration and American imperialism.

Since deciding to vote for Biden, I have become extremely marginalized myself. My friends are giving me shit for voting Biden, always making jokes about how I've gone soft and that I'm some lib communist. It'll be a cold day in hell before I call myself a fucking commie. See? I have a lot to put up with. It's never been harder to be a rich white man in America.

As an old white man who doesn't know how to interact with young people and is overly handsy with women, I don't feel represented by Biden at all. This was a really tough decision to make. But I knew the moral high ground I could claim by not voting for Trump this time would lead to orgasmic levels of pleasure when I told everyone about the noble choice I made. All that matters is that I earn back a decent enough reputation so that I can finally leave this world and descend back into the depths of Hell that birthed me.
