AMIDST COVID SPIKE, DEAN GROVES DENIES RUSH

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA—With calls mounting for the University to take a stand against dangerous Greek in-person recruitment events, Dean Groves asserted in an exclusive interview that not only is there no correlation between recruitment and the recent spike in cases—but that spring rush isn’t happening at all.

Though you may wonder what hordes of white boys roaming the Rugby Road might be doing at 2am collectively wearing oversized navy blazers, mom-bought khakis, and certainly not masks, Dean Groves has assured us that this has nothing to do with baseless allegations of in-person IFC rush. In fact, this phenomenon has been described as a yearly migration ritual, integral to the UVa white male experience. First-year student Kauch E. Bassturd described the migration as “sick,” and then, quickly, “not in the way that Covid is ‘sick,’ though, haha.”

You may have seen these young men double-veoRiding from Mad Bowl to dorms while coughing feverishly, but Groves explains these wheezes are a mating call to a species also seen at this time, the Golden Goose-Footed Ladybirds. And as for reports that these lads can’t even taste the watery Busch Light they’re forced to shotgun, locals needn’t be afraid. This lack of taste doesn’t stem from Covid-19—the white man has long been known to feature Cherub’s “Doses and Mimosas” in any and all playlists.

“It’s a scientific mystery,” adds Dr. Will ‘Phil’ E. Ignorant, a leading expert on frat ecology. “Every year, these subjects gather in droves, defying all understanding. But it is overwhelmingly clear that these gatherings are not a part of any recruitment process, but rather a cherished ritual of Charlottesville’s precious endemic species, the homo albus.”

The certainly unrelated uptick of positive COVID tests reported around this event stems from representative sample of the entire UVa student body, distributed evenly across students who favor the Rainbow Sandals brand and those who have preexisting medical conditions requiring them to visit Boylan on a weekly basis.

UNIVERSITY UNVEILS NEW RESTRICTIONS FOR LAWN ROOM SIGNS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA—The University of Virginia—a bastion of individual expression, intellectual discourse, and free speech—has at long last revealed its guidelines for signage on the idyllic Lawn. The 2021-2022 Lawn housing contract includes an assortment of updated restrictions:

- Posters should be 12pt Times New Roman, double-spaced, with 1.5inch margins and MLA-formatted citations complete with annotated bibliography due by 11:59 in Collab. No extensions
- An orientation including a viewing of cult classic “Rubber” required before submitting designs for approval
- Please respect our UNESCO world heritage site by encouraging streakers to run as fast as possible
- Poems praising Jim Ryan’s leadership must be in iambic pentameter
- If the BOV cares more about donors than students. I don’t care bc I did. No I didn’t <3
- No unmarked Demon Slayer spoilers for the love of god

- Spotify codes are permitted but only links to Steely Dan’s seminal comeback album Two Against Nature

- Ye shall post no signs reasonablye critiquing the Universitye’s troubled past lest ye first answer these riddles three:

ONE: If you kin a lamp, you’ve heard of me...

which Pat am I, heeheehee?

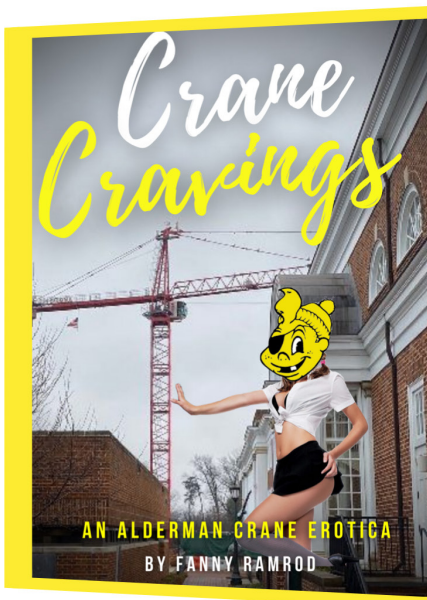

TWO: Upon this hill of cars
I roam, the mansion of presidents I call my home!

THREE: Are you in YDSA or have otherwise radically left politics?

- Violation of any of the above can result in ambassador servitude for up to 5 years and a monetary fine of 200 Plus Dollars

“The Lawn has always been at the heart of this institution’s audacious commitment to free expression,” says administrator Mora Leeb Ankrup. “But recently some people started saying things we don’t like. Silencing these pesky dissenting opinions will make it much easier for students who bravely stand with this University to speak freely.”

YELLOW JOURNAL'S GUIDE TO UVA SLANG

Ah, the University of Virginia. Known well for its idiosyncrasies—its ceremonies, societies, and colloquialisms—it boasts a student culture truly unlike any other. But due to the isolation of the pandemic, many new students feel overwhelmed with all of the jargon flying around: Foxfield, LoTL, Lemonata. So we here at the Yellow Journal put together this helpful guide to the slang every UVA student should know!

Grounds: What we call campus! :D

Big BOADS: Students' term for Bodo's Bagels.

The K.A.L.A.M.A.R.I. Society: Secret society known to don squid costumes and run through Clem during finals, hollering "He is here," and "His Time is upon us." One special student will be offered a taste of their Sacred Squid, which is said to promote good luck on one's exams.

Wahoowa: Short for "Wah mom hoo had my wawa," what most scholars consider to be Jefferson's last words.

Thong: A grueling 24 hours where everyone is required to wear their underwear, on their honor.

LoTL: Short for "Loser of the Lantern." In this classic Festivus celebration, the community joins hands on the Lawn and the ceremonial lantern is passed from person to person. The first person who lets the flame extinguish is this year's Loser, and they are shunned by all until next year.

The Lawn: The grass area outside O'Hill where first-years can play spikeball (shirts discouraged).

O'Hill: Short for Flannery O'Hill, local hero who died protecting Dunlison.

Fourth Year Fist: The toughest, scrappiest fourth years get together for a secret fighting ring. Who's the brawniest?

Foxfield: Once a year, UVA students start their morning at six AM with a breakfast of beer and cheerios. They stumble onto a swath of grass, dressed in their most douchey Vera Bradley dresses and foam Vineyard Vines hats, and black out by noon as horses trot past. At the end of the day, one brave soul captions their Instagram post, "Actually saw a horse " and then is thrown beneath the hooves of the fastest horse on the track.

St. Patty's Skidmark: March's biggest St. Patrick's Day party. UVA students throw down on the corner by drinking a concoction known as "Patty's Laxative", which consists of Guinness, Bold Rock, and Bailey's Irish Cream. The first to shit on the floor of Trin 3 is crowned St. Skidmark and given a Jefferson Scholarship.

Batten Chili Cook Off: The Batten School of Leadership & Public Policy's annual competition in which student teams prepare their best chili recipe for a panel of judges. Winner is given an immediate 6-figure consulting position at Deloitte. A handwritten banner announcing the cook off stays on the amphitheater wall for weeks afterward.

Flapping: The sacred act of rubbing one out on Flats property.

UVA Fecal Collection Institute: Named and dated samples from UVA's most distinguished alumni.

DillardDookie: In the most haunted dorm on grounds, they always find a turdlet in the belltower. Is there a way to reach the bell by foot? No. Does it always happen before May? Indubitably.

FyreFest Lite: Students light various areas around Grounds on fire in celebration of the end of midterms. Jim Ryan's favorite unofficial holiday.

I'd recommend going into CS if you actually want to do something with your life. I got a Google internship as a first year, obvs you might not be that talented but it's somewhere to start. If you HAVE to go into arts and crafts, make sure you know how to code. EDIT: also, make sure you have an internship going into first year so you can be prepared to apply for second-year internships.

I don't know how anyone can stand other subjects, especially all the troglodytes recommending CS. I was turned away with disgust when I failed some automated tests due to a missing space of comma - as an Echols Scholar and a Science Major, that trivial nonsense turned me away from the irredeemable discipline of Computer "Science." # ELON MUSK OPENS HOLE

In a move that has been described as “baffling,” science dirtbag Elon Musk has unveiled his narrow white hole to millions of people this past month. Causing no shortage of confusion and consternation, the hole has left many people with blue brains full of unanswered questions. “Hey, this looks really narrow, can our ambulance even fit?” asked one paramedic, who has subsequently been blasted on Twitter after Musk replied to him with a “u mad?” meme.

In all fairness to Musk, nothing says billionaire genius like a tight hole that can accommodate the quick come and go of bullet trains. Placing the inviting aperture near LA was definitely a good decision, as the city’s public transportation system is woefully underfunded -- Sorry, we’ve gotten word that they are not bullet... okay... they’re not even trains? So a bus... How fast does the car go?

CORRECTION: We’ve gotten word that the only thing fit to enter this hole is a specially modified Tesla that moves at a speed best suited for a suburban side street. A Tesla spokesperson said “As soon as your wheels hit the greased up track, you’ll know that you’re in for the ride of your life.”

Public transit fans expressed their dismay at the girthless plan. “It just seems kind of ridiculous to build a whole tunnel for one car at a time. Even a bus could eliminate much more traffic and reduce emissions,” noted the renowned environmentalist Atrree Hugger.

When he was confronted, Musk responded “A bus!? That’s far too much for my hole.” But with pressure from activists mounting, Musk suggests a gradual approach: “Things are tight right now, but maybe we could start with something modest like a Jeep Explorer and loosen things up.”

Some people have fully embraced the hole. “Yep, I just think it’s fantastic,” said Hupper Klass, 47. “I’m on my 4th Tesla after the last 3 caught on fire in my driveway, and I can’t wait to slide into that silky smooth tunnel.” Some reports are unclear on what exactly Musk was thinking when he designed the tunnel, as there seems to be no way to pull out the back once you get in too deep. A leading scientist at Harvard has offered up the explanation of “nothing.” More on this story as it develops.

V. CHRONOLOGY OF EVENTS AS AGREED UPON BY BOTH PARTIES:

At about mile 22, the sweaty Ryan saw young Fatherson enjoying a delicious popsicle to cool off as he waited on the side of the marathon route for Adult Sonfather (Fatherson's Father) to pass by. As Fatherson savored his delectable treat, Ryan yanked the popsicle from his hand like he was taking candy from a baby. As Fatherson exploded into tears, Ryan slurped the frozen goodness and continued on his merry way. Ryan confessed to the crimes but brushed it off as a "silly oopsie" in a recent video lauding fraternity brothers for spreading Covid-19 to a third of the student population. Fatherson just wanted a sweet treat.

What Your Covid Vaccine Flavor Says About You

Moderna

As the vaccine that Dr. Fauci and Dolly Parton got, you can look forward to some side effects that make you as sexy as these two pandemic-fighting icons. Be prepared to either grow a bodacious rack or to shrink into a kind, old man who resembles an Italian mouse - both very sexy! This summer, you may be feeling more basic than you're used to as the superiority you felt from getting the edgier vaccine fades away. Just remember, it's okay to let your hair down and do what you want without fearing judgment from others. Get that new Starbucks drink. Do some shopping at Lululemon. Hell, you should probably even stream Taylor Swift's most recent album at this point.

- DO: Modernize, industrialize, colonize
- DON'T: Insist that your favorite colors are black and white but refer to them as "shades"

Pfizer

Your summer outlook: The P in Pfizer stands for pretty bitch - and you feel it! The hunk of frozen turd ejected from the international space station is in retrograde, which means you're gonna somehow have a lot of sex these next couple months, but it'll all be bad. Take time to check in with yourself and show gratitude (for that extra 1% effectiveness, baby). The warm weather brings power in routine, getting iced coffee, and killing your house plants.

- DO: Prada, Pretentious, Pre-exposure prophylaxis
- DON'T: Panda express, Punch children, Pregnant

Johnson + Johnson

Big things on the horizon ahead! You are going to be walking the path less traveled by this month, and it could pay off. You seek convenience and aren't too fussy. You are often mistaken for baby shampoo. Just like the conglomerate from which you are born, you can do just about anything: invent the band-aid, sell mouthwash or profit off human suffering.

- DO: Have a weekend fling that ends in a lifelong rivalry
- DON'T: Eat apples. You have a doctor's appointment coming up

Astrazeneca

Got a text! This summer, yew may be hopin' for a bit of cheeky banter with a fit bird but be wary - this vaccine may be properly mugging you off! You started off the night grafting, proper vibes between the two of yew, but these fookin blood clots are makin yew not really sure where your head's at - seriously chived about the whole thing! Stop putting all yer eggs in one basket, finding love in the villa takes time. Yew gotta be open to gettin to know the other islanders.

- DO: A bit of mackin, beans on toast, shutting down the government for 8 days
- DON'T: Snog your headmaster

CVS Cool Ranch Vaccine

Your summer will be filled with big decisions, and you feel level-headed enough to take them on. Your love life is looking unusually chilly, but it will come around in a big way once you finally get flexible enough to suck your own toes. Expect the smelly and unexpected.

- DO: Bathe
- DON'T: Think highly of yourself

YELLOW JOURNAL ENDORSES CELEBRITY BIDS FOR POLITICAL OFFICE

From Donald Trump, who rose to prominence with his role in Home Alone 2, to Matthew McConaughey, most famously known for being alright alright alright, more and more celebrities are bravely paving the way for equitable access to the world of American politics. We here at the Yellow Journal would therefore like to take this time to formally endorse some more political outsiders who will truly drain the swamp!

Matt Damon: Truly an everyman, by which we mean he looks like at least one third of all white men – which could make for a very fun “mistaken president sightings” instagram page! This little chameleon has already been to Harvard and Mars, so the next logical stop is our nation’s capital to duke it out with the institutional antagonist, as he always does.

Lana Del Rey: She is clearly itching to pull back her political foreskin, and honestly? Anything to keep her from announcing yet another album. Edit: too late.

The Property Brothers: These two could bring something new and exciting to the drab political scene: twincest! Furthermore, they are well-versed in the art of being the bearers of bad news when it comes to asbestos or termites, so who knows? Maybe they can do a little fixer upper on the oppressive foundation of America.

Tina Fey: We’d be remiss to leave our favorite famous Hoo off of this list! Tina’s strongest political skills involve not showing up to things she’s invited to and spewing absolute nonsense. Besides, we were robbed of Hillary back in 2016, so America owes us someone else who can whip and nae nae on national television.

Kris Jenner: She turned a leaked sex tape into a multi-million dollar franchise and a 20-season long reality TV show. She’s done more for America than any modern-day politician by providing us with timeless classics such as “There was someone in the bathroom who just peed really loud and strong for three minutes” and “You’re doing amazing sweetie.”

Nicolas Cage: A born constitutionalist, Cage is one of the only politicians who can uncover the bullshit our founding fathers wrote with just his blowdryer and some lemon juice. Plus, he can’t kidnap himself.
